DETAILED ACTION

The amendment filed on May 4, 2005 has been received and entered. Claims 1-3 have been amended. Claims 10 and 11 have been canceled, and claims 15 and 16 have been added. Accordingly, claims 1-7 and 12-16 are examined on the merits herewith.

The text of those sections of Title 35, U.S. Code not included in this action can be found in a prior Office action.

Priority

Regarding Applicants' claim of priority to Danish application PA 2002 01021, filed on July 1, 2002, and to U.S. provisional application, 60/393,275, filed on July 1, 2002, Applicants comment that these applications disclose the use of several protein hydrolysates in the fermentation medium is noted. Nevertheless, as previously noted, these applications are concerned with a method of improving the yield of a recombinant peptide produced in fermentation by adding monopropylene glycol to the medium, to inhibit the precipitation or crystallization of the recombinant protein. The subject matter of the instant claims is not disclosed in these applications. Accordingly, Applicants may wish to correct their priority claim.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

In view of Applicants' amendments to the claims, the rejection under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) is withdrawn.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

Claims 1-7 and 12-14 are again rejected, and claims 15 and 16 are rejected, under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Huchette et al. (US 4,766,070).

This rejection was discussed in the previous Office action.

In reply to Applicants' arguments, Applicants note that Huchette does not disclose or suggest prehydrolyzing the complex N-source to a degree of 1-20%. But, Applicants have not shown that prehydrolyzing the complex N-source to various degrees within the range of 1-20% results in improved yields of a protease or peptidase fermentation product. Example 12 teaches that when the N-source is hydrolyzed 2.9% before sterilization, compared to 51% hydrolysis before sterilization, a significantly improved yield and reduced product degradation result. This result, however, is obtained with only one prehydrolyzed N-source- 2.9% hydrolysis. Improved results are also shown in the production of an α -amylase, using a N-source that was prehydrolyzed to a degree of 19.5%. But, in this case, it is not a protease or peptidase that is produced, i.e., an enzyme that might itself be capable of breaking down the N-source for use by the fermenting microorganism. Therefore, although Applicants have shown that a low degree of N-source hydrolysis, about 3%, can improve product yields for a protease, it cannot be predicted that this result applies to other enzymes and other degrees of hydrolysis above 3% to 20%.

Nevertheless, if Applicants can present such data for other enzymes and other degrees of hydrolysis of 20% and below, they will be considered.

Art Unit: 1651

In view of the foregoing, the rejection of record is maintained.

No claim is allowed.

Applicants' amendment necessitated the new ground(s) of rejection presented in this Office action. Accordingly, THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. See MPEP § 706.07(a). Applicants are reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the date of this final action.
